CLIMATE ACTION AND WASTE REDUCTION

From São Paulo to Davos: What needs to happen in climate finance

Nov 21, 2025

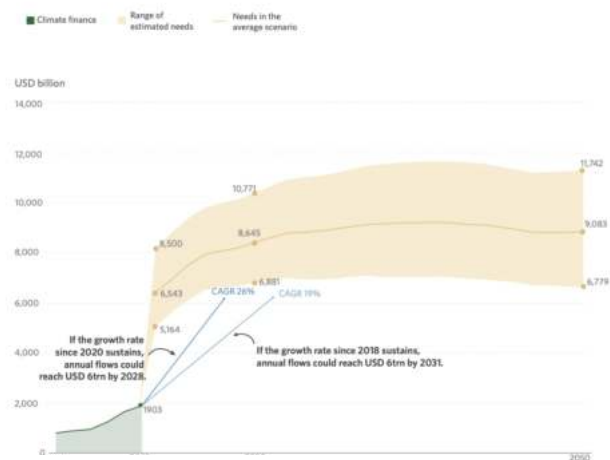

Development finance and climate finance must be on par

Climate finance is not only a development issue but a global financial risk. While development and climate finance were once treated as separate agendas, both face the same structural challenge: fragmentation. The systems that underpin them are dispersed across multiple funds, facilities and institutions that operate with overlapping goals but different procedures and timelines.

This lack of coherence slows delivery and increases costs, placing the heaviest burden on countries most in need of support. Each new declaration or coalition generates momentum but often without the institutional pathways needed for delivery. The outcome is that even well-intentioned initiatives compete for attention and capacity, while opportunities to align

A Sincere Welcome: If you receive this PDF, your organisation has been identified as a credible institution suited to hold a limited corporate partner role at Davos—where reputation is shaped through standards, proximity, and measurable outcomes.

I will personally steward your organisation's positioning and engagement across WEF week, with the objective of converting a concentrated set of moments. In Particular; the Gala & Awards-Ceremony at Schatzalp – that defines strategic alignment, curated introductions, and durable credibility. This is not a mass networking. It is a discreet, invitation-only platform designed for a small number of partners to be visible with meaning—in the right rooms, with the right peers, at the moments that matter.

– Mr. Thomas Wibe Tougaard –
Investment Manager & Principal, HQ Capital Partners
